Course Assessment: Final Report Topics and Requirements

Assignment Type	Submission	Due Date	Total Marks
Group Assignment	Written Repot	2026/10/06	50

The following topics are available for the Final Report Assignment. This is a group project, and each group should consist of 4–5 members. Please form your groups carefully, taking into consideration your ability to work effectively with your chosen teammates.

Once groups have been formed, members are expected to work collaboratively and resolve any group-related issues internally. Each group is required to prepare a comprehensive report on one of the assigned topics.

The detailed requirements, formatting instructions, and assessment guidelines are provided in this document. Please read them carefully and ensure that all guidelines are followed throughout in the preparation and submission of your report.

1. Comprehensive Business Analysis

Select a well-known company of your choice (e.g., Apple, Tesla, Huawei, BYD, or any other globally or locally recognized firm) and conduct a comprehensive business analysis by applying the core concepts covered throughout this course. Your report should address the following:

a) Company Overview: Provide a concise background of the company.
b) Management & Organizational Structure: Identify and explain the company's organizational structure (e.g., functional, divisional, flat, or matrix).
c) Marketing Strategy: Identify the company's primary target market and analyze its current marketing mix using the 4Ps framework (Product, Price, Place, and Promotion).
d) Operations Management: Describe the company's key operational processes, including its supply chain, service delivery model, or production approach.
e) Human Resource Management (HRM): Examine the company's HRM practices, including its approach to recruitment, employee development, performance management, and organizational culture if available.
f) Financial Performance: Analyze the company's recent financial performance using available data (e.g., revenue trends, profitability, key financial ratios). Discuss what the numbers reveal about the company's financial health.
g) Conclusion & Recommendations Summarize your key findings and provide at least two or three actionable recommendations to improve the company's overall business performance, supported by your analysis.

2. Business Plan for a Startup

Develop an original startup idea and create a comprehensive business plan for it. You are free to choose any product or service of interest, provided it addresses a real consumer or market need. Your business plan should cover the following:

a. Idea Description: Clearly describe your proposed product or service. Explain the problem it solves, the gap it fills in the market.
b. Business Model: Describe how your startup will create, deliver, and capture value.
c. Target Market & Marketing Plan: Identify your primary target market and explain why they are the right audience for your product or service. Develop a marketing plan using the 4Ps framework (Product, Price, Place, and Promotion).
d. Organizational Structure: Identify and explain the organizational structure most suitable for your startup (e.g., functional, flat, or matrix). Justify why this structure fits your business size and goals.
e. Human Resource Plan: Outline the key roles and positions needed to run your startup. For each role, briefly describe the responsibilities and the type of candidate you seek to hire. Include an organizational chart if appropriate.
f. Financial Forecast: Provide a basic financial projection for the first year of operations. This should include estimated startup costs, projected monthly or annual revenue, major expense categories, and an approximate break-even point.
g. Operational Setup: Describe the day-to-day operations of your startup, including the business location or platform, equipment or technology required, key suppliers or partners, and how your product or service will be delivered to customers.
